REAL HAIR SAVER

Found at Last—Shows Results in Three Days, Says Local Druggist.

If you are rapidly losing your hair and fear baldness, the Red Cross Pharmacy invites you to make a three days' test of Parisian Sage. It does not stop the excessive loss of hair and make your hair and scalp look and feel at least 100 per cent better, they will return your money.

Hundreds of men and women have written telling of the phenomenal results obtained by using Parisian Sage. People who were bald say they now glory in their beautiful hair. Others who have had dandruff for years say they got a clean, healthy scalp after just a few applications of this splendid treatment.

No matter whether you are bothered with falling hair, prematurely gray hair, dry, dull and brittle hair, oily, greasy, stringy hair, dandruff or itching scalp, this well-known local firm invites you to try Parisian Sage at their risk. If it succeeds the cost is trifling, and should it fail the cost is nothing. No string or red tape to this money-back offer. If your hair is worth saving, Parisian Sage is worth trying, and a large bottle is inexpensive at your favorite drug or toilet counter.—Adv.

Topics of the Home and Household.

Memorize your recipes in common use. Whenever you prepare an article of food, learn the recipe. It is easily done and saves much time and trouble on future occasions, aside from its educational value.

A rubber sponge in the bathroom will be found useful in cleaning the porcelain tub and the basin. It is easy to use, easy to dry, and is not an unsightly object to keep conveniently at hand.

Crocuses may be had in winter if treated like the Japanese lilies. Put the bulbs in a shallow earthen dish of water half filled with pebbles. Keep them in a dark place for a little while and then in the light, but do not set them in the sunlight until the flower buds form, which will be in two or three weeks.

Sandpaper the perches of bird cages instead of washing them. It will give them a smoother surface and may also save the bird from catching cold by standing on a damp perch.

If you cut the tip of your finger when you are busy in the kitchen do not stop to tie a clumsy bandage on it, but put a small piece of clean linen over the cut and then put on your thumb until your work is done, and you can give the matter better attention.

For marking handkerchiefs and under-clothing for a large family of children, use numbers instead of names. The work numbers are very neat and easily applied to the garment. Their use saves much time formerly spent in marking the article or the linen tape, which afterwards had to be stitched on. Moreover, the tiniest tot soon learns its own number and can find its own belongings. The little ones of three and five years love to be allowed to help sort out the laundry for the flock of six.

Be Natural.

The world has established certain standards of etiquette for those who would be recognized as well bred and cultured. The earlier in life these standards are adopted the better for the woman. Fortunately, indeed, is she who has cultivated early in life a soft voice, poised grace of carriage and the "pretty" way of doing things. She need have no fear that in a moment of excitement she will forget herself and be guilty of a faux pas.

Absolutely destructive of naturalness in manner is self-consciousness. This affliction amounts at times almost to an obsession. It causes women to shout who wish to speak low; it leads often to an assumption of bravado, causing criticism that may be unjust, but is invited and unavoidable.

It is a gentle art, the art of being natural; one that is essential to every woman who wishes to be regarded as interesting, attractive and popular. No woman with an ounce of brains will allow herself to become the victim of affectation if she would get the most that is possible out of life.

"Giving a Fig for It."

Whoever first declared that he or she "wouldn't give a fig for it"—whatever it might be—surely could not have learned to appreciate this luscious southern fruit, capable of so many variations and fitting so pleasantly into many means.

In the South, fresh figs, or raw figs, are considered much better than the dried ones which are packed and sent farther north. Down there they are so fortunate as to live "beneath their own vine and fig tree" and the fresh figs, served with cream and sugar, make a delicious breakfast dish, says the Christian Science Monitor. The taste for them has to be cultivated, however, by those not brought up to it; and for most tables the dried figs are the only acceptable ones, as well as the only available ones.

Dried figs cut into bits and mixed with cooked cereals or flaked breakfast foods serve quite as well as fresh fruit on occasion. Bits of dried figs also add an interesting flavor to a fruit salad.

Stewed figs make a delicious sauce for luncheon or to take the place of jelly in serving with meats. They are prepared as follows: Wash well unpressed dried figs; soak overnight in warm water. In the morning stew until tender in the liquid in which they were soaked. Add sugar, if necessary, and allow the liquid to evaporate until a thick syrup is formed.

Baked Figs—Wash well and soak overnight in just enough water to cover one-half pound of dried whole figs. In the morning add one-half cup of sugar, one-half tablespoon of butter, the juice of one lemon, a grating of nutmeg and bake one hour in a moderate oven.

A steamed fig pudding may be made as follows: To two and one-half cups of flour, sifted with one teaspoon of soda, one teaspoon each of ginger, cinnamon and nutmeg, add one cup of molasses, one cup of sweet milk, one cup of chopped suet, and one cup of stoned raisins. Place in molds the size of one-pound baking powder tins. Steam two hours and serve with a foamy sauce. To make this, beat the whites of two eggs until foamy, add one cup of sugar, beat well, then add one cup of scalded milk and the juice of one lemon. Water may be substituted for milk. To make it yellow use the whole egg.

Fig Turnovers—Mix and sift three cups of flour, three-fourths of a teaspoon of salt and four teaspoons of baking

DIGESTION WORTH HAVING

Good digestion is not appreciated until you lose it. Then you cannot afford to experiment on remedies. Strong medicines are hard on weak stomachs. To be able to eat what you want and to digest it is a priceless blessing. If you have lost it do not be deceived by the claims of prodigious foods and stomach tonics, so-called.

There is no tonic for the stomach that is not a tonic for every other part of the body. As the blood goes everywhere, an improvement in its condition quickly results in strengthening weak organs. Rich, red blood is absolutely necessary to digestion. If your stomach is weak and you are troubled with gas, sour risings in the throat, a feeling of pressure about the heart and palpitation, try the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

So many dyspeptics have been helped by this simple treatment that every sufferer from stomach trouble should try it. The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., has issued a booklet "What to Eat and How to Eat" that should be in every home. It gives just the information that you want regarding your diet. The company will mail Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, postpaid, at fifty cents per box or your own druggist can supply you.

powder. Rub one and one-half table-spoons of butter into the flour; then beat one egg, add to it one cup of milk, mix and add gradually to the flour. The dough should be soft, but not wet. Turn out quickly onto a floured board, roll into a sheet a half inch thick and cut into rounds with a biscuit cutter. Dip a knife handle into flour, press down in the center of each biscuit, making a sort of hinge; have ready eight or ten figs, chopped fine. Put one tablespoon of fig mixture on one-half of the roll, brush over lightly with white of egg, fold the other one-half over, and press the edges well together. Bake in a quick oven 20 minutes. Serve warm, with cream or milk and sugar.

In this little special collection of fig recipes there may be included for convenience the following one for jellied figs, which has been previously printed. Wash eight whole figs and cook in boiling water until the skin is tender. Drain the figs from the liquid, of which there should be one-half cup. Soften one-fourth ounce of gelatin in two table-spoons of cold water, then dissolve in the hot liquid from the figs. Add one-fourth cup of sugar, stir until dissolved and cooled somewhat, then add the juice of half a lemon, one-fourth cup of orange juice, and strain into a shallow dish. When firm, cut in cubes. Whip one-half cup of double cream until very stiff, add a few drops of vanilla. Place the figs in the center of a serving dish and surround with the whipped cream and the cubes of jelly, alternating cream and jelly.

Joss Sticks.

The composition of the candles called joss sticks, which are used in all the religious ceremonies of Buddhism, for a long time remained a mystery, the preparation of the sticks being intrusted to certain persons chosen from a limited class. A French chemist, however, learned the manner of making joss sticks in Indo-China. A stem of bamboo is rolled in a preparation containing fourteen different odoriferous drugs, two of which are significant as showing a knowledge of chemical and physical properties. These are aceto-nic, which serves to protect the sticks against the attacks of rats and mice, and camphor, which causes them to burn steadily without being periodically extinguished.

Your Height and Foot.

The height of the human figure is six times the length of the human foot. Whether the form is slender or plump, the rule holds good on the average; any deviation from the rule is a departure from the beauty of proportion. It is claimed that the Greeks made all their statues according to this rule.

"Does he?"

"Yes. He never sees me dressing up without giving me a dressing down."

STRUGGLE WILL BE CLOSE

The Indications Are Now for Close Race, with Slight Odds for Hughes

MASSACHUSETTS A SURPRISE

President Stronger Than His Party, Hughes Not Quite So Strong, Says N. Y. Herald

New York, Oct. 2.—The second week of the New York Herald's presidential forecast shows Mr. Hughes still ahead and by a slightly increased margin, but still not sufficiently in the lead to justify a prediction on the result of the election. Conditions are changing. People are just beginning to make up their minds. The straw votes taken in the next two weeks should give a definite indication about what will happen on November 7.

No fight for the presidency in the last twenty-eight years at least has, at the corresponding stage of the campaign, given such promise of a close race. From all that can be gathered from 57,209 straw votes, taken in twenty-eight states—the ten southern states are omitted from the canvass, being solidly Democratic—it appears to be a safe assertion that the Republicans have a shade the better of the contest just now. The situation might be summarized as follows:

President Wilson is stronger than his party. Charles E. Hughes perhaps is not quite so strong as the Republican party in the days before it split in two in Chicago, four years ago.

In other words, the margin of difference between the parties has narrowed considerably.

Out of a total straw vote of 57,209 Mr. Hughes has a majority over the president of 3,881. This covers thirty states. Of this margin of less than 1,000 California contributes 3,632. Out of a total of 31,698 votes gathered in twenty-four states—California, Arizona, New Mexico, Nevada, Washington and Oregon excluded—Mr. Hughes leads the president by a majority of 275.

Of the twenty-eight states which appear in the tabulations Mr. Hughes leads in nineteen, the president in nine. Last week the president led in seven and Mr. Hughes in fifteen. Only twenty-two were included in the recapitulation at that time.

The nineteen which lean toward Mr. Hughes this week are Maryland, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Rhode Island, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Wisconsin, Michigan, Kansas, Nebraska, California, Minnesota and Colorado.

The nine which favor the president are New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Massachusetts, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma and Arizona.

The total straw vote taken in some of the states is small and not yet representative of the whole commonwealth in some instances. That is no doubt true in Connecticut, where the Democrats have a substantial lead in the first ballots. A large proportion of this vote came from workers in ammunition factories, which fairly crowd the Nutmeg state, and these men, it appears, are overwhelmingly for the president. However, it would seem to be a safe statement that Connecticut is a close state.

New Jersey, in which but 1,649 votes

MRS. MAY'S LETTER TO WOMEN

More Proof that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Relieves Suffering.

Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a bad case of female ills. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound was recommended and I took about six bottles. It fixed me up all right. The common symptoms of such a condition—pain when walking, irritation, bearing down pains and backache, nervousness and disordered digestion—soon passed away. I look much better now than I did before, and I recommend the Compound every time for female troubles, as it did for me it is claimed to do. You have my permission to publish this letter." Mrs. J. MAY, 3548 S. Lincoln St., Chicago, Ill.

If you have any of the symptoms mentioned in Mrs. May's letter, remember what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for her, and try it yourself. It is a good old-fashioned medicine, made from roots and herbs, and it has helped countless numbers of women.

If you need special advice, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman, and held in strict confidence.

have been taken, shows a remarkable drift toward the president also. Especially is this true among the workers. New Jersey is literally jammed with factories in the part contiguous to New York state, where a good proportion of the Herald's votes have been taken. Nevertheless, it is very evident that New Jersey will be no walkaway for either nominee. It is likewise a close state.

The defeat of John W. Westcott, the president's candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination, might indicate that there is a very large but silent anti-Wilson vote in Jersey. Massachusetts is one of the surprises of the campaign thus far. Ordinarily a strong Republican state, it is by no means, as revealed thus far by the straw vote, an unchangeable Republican state. In a fairly representative, though as yet small vote, taken there, the president leads. The percentage of changes from Taft (1912) to Wilson is comparatively large in the Bay state. The Progressive return to the Republican party is but two to one over the president. Massachusetts presents some peculiar and interesting shifts this year, and the Herald's authority this week says it must for the time being at least, be set down as doubtful.

Charging that Republicans take the counsel of "those who have hitherto acted as the counselors of the vested interests in Mexico," the president declared that these men had tried to get what they wanted from him, but had failed, and "now are going where they think they can get it."

Still discussing the foreign affairs of the country, Mr. Wilson stated that on account of the political uses made of foreign relations, "it is going to be practically impossible for the present administration to handle any critical matter concerning our foreign relations, because all foreign statesmen are waiting to see which way the election goes, and in the meantime they know that settlements would be inconclusive."

Most of Mr. Wilson's address was devoted to criticism of the Republican party and to outlining his own plans. In front and below him were young Democrats who went there from New York on special trains and marched with bands playing and banners waving more than a mile to Shadow Lawn. Frequently he was forced to stop speaking for several minutes while the applause lasted.

A bid was made by Mr. Wilson for the votes of Progressives. He praised the Progressive party as having "the real red blood of human sympathy in its veins," and declared the Democratic party had done the things the Progressives wanted to do.

Briefly the president referred to the hypenate issue. He said: "Back of the party (the Republican) are those who want to inject into our politics the politics of Europe."

G.O.P. SUCCESS MEANS WAR

President Declares It Means War in Both Mexico and Europe

DIPLOMATS ALERT WATCHING ELECTION

Says That Special Interest With Stakes in Mexico Back Republicans

Long Branch, N. J., Oct. 2.—In a vigorous denunciation of the Republican party, President Wilson Saturday told a delegation of young Democrats from New York that "the certain prospect" of Republican success in November is that "we shall be drawn, in one form or another, into the embroilments of the European war," and that "the force of the United States will be used to produce in Mexico the kind of law and order which some investors in Mexico consider most to their advantage." The president made his first out-and-out political speech of the campaign from the porch of Shadow Lawn. Urged on by the enthusiastic cheers and waving banners of several thousand young men, he flayed the Republican party and laid down the issues on which he believes the campaign should be fought.

"Am I not right that we must draw the conclusion that if the Republican party is put into power at the next election, our foreign policy will be radically changed?" he asked. "I cannot draw any other inference. All our present foreign policy is wrong, they say, and if it is wrong and they are men of conscience, they must change it. And if they are going to change it, in what direction are they going to change it? There is only one choice as against peace, and that is war."

Charging that Republicans take the counsel of "those who have hitherto acted as the counselors of the vested interests in Mexico," the president declared that these men had tried to get what they wanted from him, but had failed, and "now are going where they think they can get it."

Still discussing the foreign affairs of the country, Mr. Wilson stated that on account of the political uses made of foreign relations, "it is going to be practically impossible for the present administration to handle any critical matter concerning our foreign relations, because all foreign statesmen are waiting to see which way the election goes, and in the meantime they know that settlements would be inconclusive."
